Where Roses Grow.

For many centuries the growing of roses for the manufacture of perfume has been an important industry in many places.

In the south of France and in Algeria rose culture is conducted upon a large scale. Shiraz, in Persia, and Ghazipur, in India, have long been important centers of the industry, and so has Medinet-Fayoum, in Egypt. But, most noted of all, yielding the largest quantity and the finest quality, is Kananlik, in eastern Bulgaria—the valley of roses.

This lovely valley lies on the southern slope of the Balkans, sheltered by its towering sides from the cold north winds, and is the center of a district which yields on an average nearly 4,000 pounds avoirdupois of attar of roses, representing a commercial value of $180,000. —New York Tribune.

A Russian Priest's Wife.

In Russia it is a common mode of expression to say "as happy as a priest's wife." The reason she is so happy is because her husband's position depends upon her. If she dies he is deposed, and his property is taken away from him and distributed, half to his children and half to the government. The dreadful contingency makes the Russian priest careful to get a healthy wife, if he can, and makes him take extraordinarily good care of her after he has secured her.—Womanland.

A Marshal's Retort.

The Marshal de Bassompierre was employed by Henry IV on several embassies. He once told the king that when he went as ambassador to Spain he rode into Madrid on the most beautiful mule he had ever seen, which had been sent by the Spanish monarch for his special use.

"Ha, ha, what a comical sight!" laughed out the boisterous king "an ass upon a mule!"

"Yes, sire," said Bassompierre coolly, "I represented your majesty." —All the Year Round.

ZULEIKA'S BEEHIVES.

"Papa, I really think you ought to interfere," said Zuleika, her cheeks aflame.

"Papa, I do wish you would put Zuleika in her place, once for all," said Rosamond the rebel.

The professor laid down his pen with a polysyllabic word yet unfinished, and sighed a Borean sigh.

"More trouble," said he. "What is the matter now?"

"Aunt Pauline has sent me a cherry colored cashmere dress," spattered Zuleika—"the prettiest color!—and three yards of snash to trim it with. And—And Rosa has so coolly appropriated it."

"I needed a new gown," observed Rosamond. "And Zu can do very well with her dyed sage green. Besides, I'm the oldest!"

"Is that any reason you should be a thief?" retorted the trait Zuleika.

"Girls, girls!" protested the professor, turning his slim white fingers in the hair of his head.

"Make her give it back to me, papa!" said Zuleika. "It's mine! Aunt Pauline never sent it to her. She has no business to take it."

"Tell her to remember that she is only a child, papa," calmly remarked Rosamond, "and that she ought to defer to her elders."

Zuleika so far forgot her dignity as to make a face at Rosamond at this stage of the discussion.

"Oh, I just wish Capt. Calverly could know what a white supple you are," said she. "Just wait till I get a chance—won't I tell him about the Balm of Roses and the Coreopsis Cream for the Complexion, and—"

"Papa, will you silence her?" appealed Rosamond, with the expression of a griefed angel.

"Girls, girls," groaned the professor, "do reflect. Here is this manuscript to be sent off to The Scientific Bi-Weekly at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and how do you suppose it's to be done? Rosamond, don't tease your sister. Zuleika, be a good girl, and mind what Rosamond says."

The professor went back to his stacks of pens and pools of ink. Rosamond darted one triumphant glance at her younger sister, and sailed like a royal galleon out of the door.

Zuleika ran headlong into the garden and never let loose the torrent of her sobs and tears until she was safe down among the pinks and phloxes, where the bees went in and out of two little hives and kept up a murmurous hum.

"I wish I was one of you, you dear little brown beldams!" passionately cried she, resting her chin in her hands as she sat staring at them, her vision blurred by tears. "Then there wouldn't be any question of gowns and boots and horrid, cross elder sisters. I wonder is it wicked to hate Rosamond as I do? I shouldn't hate her if she was kind and considerate to me and acted as if she loved me just the least little bit in the world. It isn't the cherry colored cashmere so much—though I would like a new gown that hadn't been dyed over, and that Rosamond hadn't worn all the beauty out of before I got hold of it—but it's the hateful, hideous, outrageous injustice of the thing. I've almost a mind to run away, or to go for hired help, or to drown myself or to do anything. 'Jacob!'—springing suddenly to her feet—"what are you doing here?"

"Please, Miss Zuleika," said the stolid farmhand, "Eben Phelps, he's come arter the bees."

"And what business has Eben Phelps with my bees, I'd like to know?"

"Miss Jeffers told 'em to him, miss. She don't want no bees here. She's goin' to have the ground leveled for a tennis court—whatever that may be."

Zuleika Jeffers stepped tragically to the side of her beehives.

"This is too much!" said she. "They are my bees—not Miss Jeffers', and if any one dares to lay hands on a hive I'll have them presented for trespass!"

You hear that, Jacob?"

Jacob retreated. There was no mistaking the determination in Zuleika's eyes.

Eben Phelps was forced to drive away without even a parley.

"Not! I expected to carry away two hives of bees in broad daylight," he explained to Jacob. "Ye might a knowed better'n that, Jake, but I sort o' wanted to look at 'em afore I letted the bargain."

"Guess ye hadn't better," said Jacob. "Our young missy she means just what she says, and the bees is hers, anyway. Squire Bassett he kin 'em to her herself."

Rosamond Jeffers only shrugged her handsome shoulders when she heard all this.

"I mean to have my tennis court," said she. "And I mean to get rid of those old bees, all in good time. Of course Zu will rage, but she's always raging about something."

Time passed on. The cherry colored cashmere was made up, and Miss Jeffers decided to wear it for the initial time on the occasion of the visit of Mr. Franklin Jeffers, a distant cousin whose eyes she desired to appear her very best.

"If he's really the rich member of the family," argued Rosamond, "it's worth while to take a little pains with one's dress. We all know that a first impression is everything."

"I suppose you'd like to marry him and spend all his money for him," said Zuleika, who was reluctantly helping in the kitchen.

For Rosamond had decreed a stupendous "company dinner," and there was no one who made such exquisite mayonnaise as Zuleika.

Rosamond laughed scornfully.

"Little girl, should be seen and not heard," said she. "Indeed, as I have decided to invite Mrs. Matthews and Dr. and Mrs. Rayburn, there won't be room for you at the table."

Zuleika's eyes flashed.

"You won't dare to leave me out!" said she.

"You'll see whether I will or not," responded composed Rosamond.

"Rosamond," said Zuleika, her breath coming thick and fast, "it would be a judgment on you if I were to get married first after all!"

"Much chance there is of your getting married!" jeered Rosamond as she smoothed the icing on her loaf of sponge cake.

The hour of the unknown cousin's arrival came. Rosamond looked most provokingly pretty in the cherry colored cashmere and a cluster of deep red roses at her belt.

Zuleika, in the neutral tinted sage green, felt like a katydid or a grasshopper, or any other painfully insignificant insect.

"And now," said Rosamond, glancing at her imperial presence in the parlor mirror, which Zuleika was diligently polishing with plate powder and a champagne cloth. "I'm going out to gather some carnations."

Zuleika made no comment, but within herself she thought:

"Yes, do! That's right! I planted the carnations, and I watered them, and I took care of them—and you easily appropriate them! It's always so in this family, and papa never interferes to protect my rights!"

She was thus soliloquizing when she saw another reflection than her own in the mirror. She gave a jump and a scream simultaneously.

"Don't be frightened," said the apparition. "You are Rosamond, aren't you? I am your cousin Franklin."

He was very cordial and handsome, with pleasant dark eyes, a rich olive complexion, and a sweet, deep voice.

Zuleika was quite certain that she was going to like him.

"No," said she. "I'm not Rosamond. I am Zuleika, the younger sister. But I'm very glad to see you, all the same, and I'm sorry papa hasn't come back from the postoffice yet. And" (hurriedly flinging the cashmere cloth into the pot pourri jar) "I'll go out with you into the garden and show you where Rosamond is."

For she was secretly determined, in spite of her wrongs, to give Rosamond every fair chance.

Franklin Jeffers looked down at the light, agile figure as she walked beside it.

How pretty she was! What a delicate pink color burned on her clear cheeks, and how intensely blue her eyes were!

And then those silky rings of light brown hair that were flowing about her forehead—what a bewitching framework they made to her face!

"If Rosamond is prettier she must be very pretty," he thought.

At that moment the sound of shrieks and vituperations burst on the scented summer air, and Rosamond, forcing her way through the tall lilac bushes, rushed into the open garden, both hands clasped over her face.

Was it Rosamond—this figure with disheveled hair, eyes swollen to nearly twice their size, face discolored with innumerable stings, and complexion purple with rage and pain?

"It's your horrid, hateful bees that have done it, Zuleika!" she screamed. "Anyhow, I threw both the hives into the brush and smashed them, and—I'd like to fling you after them! Yes I would!"

"It wasn't the creatures' fault, Miss Jeffers," explained the voice of Jacob the hired man, who brought up the rear, beating off a cloud of infuriated insects with the brim of his straw hat. "Bees is allers quick to take offense—on 'em you jest slapped out at 'em when they came harmlessly hummin' round about your car. And it didn't better matters none when you kicked the hives over into the brook. I shouldn't wonder, now, if it was twenty-four hours afore ye could see 'em again."

"Papa," cried Rosamond, "if you don't put a stop to Zuleika's obstinacy and willfulness—"

"It isn't papa, Rosamond," said Zuleika, in a low voice, as she gently detached her sister's hand from the stranger's arm. "It is Mr. Franklin Jeffers. We came out to look for you."

"I'm sorry you're so badly stung, Cousin Rosamond," said Mr. Jeffers. "A little bicarbonate of soda, dissolved in water—"

But Rosamond, muttering a few incoherent words of excuse, vanished under the honeysuckles that draped the porch, leaving Jacob to do battle alone with the winged enemies, and Zuleika and Franklin to console each other.

And this was the "first impression" which she succeeded in making upon her unknown cousin!

"Was it my fault that Frank liked me better than you?" Zuleika asked her sister six weeks afterward. "You needn't scold me because I am engaged to be married before you. He chose for himself, didn't he?"

"It was the fault of your bees," said angry Rosamond. "I believe you kept them there on purpose."

"Won't you speak one kindly, loving word to me, Rosamond, now that I am so happy?" whispered Zuleika. "Say that you rejoice in my good fortune!"

But Rosamond remained stubbornly silent.

"I don't think," said Betsy Blair, the housekeeper, "that poor Miss Zuleika ever knew what it was to be really loved or looked after until she was engaged to Mr. Frank. The professor meant well, but he'd no eyes for anything but his books. And Miss Rosa—oh, she was a regular tyrant! And yet at the wedding everybody was saying, 'What a very amiable person Miss Jeffers is, and what a relief it must be to her to get that troublesome younger sister of hers married off.' Oh the injustice of the world!"

Her gossip, old Mrs. Hale, shook her cap borders.

"It's what we must expect this side o' the promised land!" said she stoutly. "Philadelphia Saturday Night."

His Misbehaved Limb.

"A cork leg is no end of a bore," said the man who limped. "Just think of it! I was at a dinner party the other night and it was my happy lot to have a most charming damsel fall to my share at the feast. We conversed most pleasantly through the opsters and the soup, but when the fish came she became silent and seemed unaccountably embarrassed. To draw her from this mood I redoubled my efforts to please, but in response she only flushed and looked angry. Finally, interrupting me in the midst of a little note which I composed carefully while dressing for the dinner, she said, sotto voce:

"I'll thank you to stop squeezing my foot!"

"Imagine my embarrassment! I had been treading upon her toes with my cork foot for the space between the opsters and the bridge gave a tremendous leap and landed beyond the claims and the cheers and laughter of the crowd.
